

Overall winner from Maungaraki

Maungaraki School student Alistair Fox stole the show at the Wearable Arts in Valley Schools show, winning the supreme award.

The seven year old dressed as a lamb to be named top of the 76 entries in the competition.

He was named a winner in his section, the Trash 2 Treasure event, before going on to the top honours.

Alistair was one of a successful grouping from Maungaraki School who were named as finalists or won their sections of the competition, proving the most successful school in the competition.

Yet it is only the first time that Maungaraki have entered.

The show, open to all schools in the Hutt Valley, followed Maungaraki's own wearable arts show.

A high calibre judging panel chose the winners of the Maungaraki competition that would go on to perform so well in the Hutt event. The panel comprised Deb Cumming, Programme Leader of Fashion Design at Massey University, Andy Glanville from The Dowse and Ohariu-based Labour MP Charles Chauvel.

Holding his two trophies, overall wearable arts winner Alistair Fox dressed as a sheep.