

Alana Kirby modelling the wearable art she made using more than 100 book covers, provided her by a book printer. Alana's costume celebrates New Zealand Book Week.

...Continued from page 1

stage too, the most recent being a soccer ball, very appropriate as two of the All Whites went to Puketiro School, which merged to become Maungaraki School in 1999.

Book character animals from the Hairy Maclary range feature, while one piece of wearable art made from more than 100 book covers is based on New Zealand Book Week.

Who knows what the future will hold, but some of Maungaraki students have got creative and combined the future with saving the planet. There will be environmental warriors, a shark/sea warrior and even the odd alien.

They give just a peak into what the future could hold for the Maungaraki students.